Economy Begins At Home.

There is so much talk about economy and conservation to-day that it impresses upon us all the more forcibly that economy should begin at home. You and your neighbors can start economy now at once by forming a Larkin Club-of-Ten, and buying your household supplies such as Soaps, Teas, Spices, Notions, Toilet and pharmaceutical preparations, direct from Larkin Co. Dealing with them gives you just twice as much for your money as you can get at the store. You can take what you save in the form of extra household supplies, or in the form of Premium Merchandise, of which there are 1,500 to select from. You will also get a lot of enjoyment out of your Larkin Club-of-Ten, as the meetings can be occasions for little social gatherings, luncheons, picnics, etc. If you will write to Larkin Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and ask them for their large Catalog R 101, they will be very glad to send it to you. This Catalog describes their plan in detail.

Sample of Ingalls' Satire.

Many years ago, when Senator Ingalls was in the senate, oleomargarine was a bone of contention. The debate led Ingalls to utter one of those epigrammatic sentences which made him famous. "I have never, to my knowledge, tasted oleomargarine," said Ingalls, "but I have stood in the presence of genuine butter with awe for its strength and reverence for its antiquity."

NOT LONG TO WAIT.

Little Max was so restless and fussy when his mother took him downtown that he caused her no end of bother. Finally the mother exclaimed impatiently:

"Well, young man, it will be a cold day when I bring you down with me again."

Looking up into her face with perfect innocence, the youngster said: "Pretty soon it will be winter, won't it, mamma?"—Youngstown Telegram.

SACRIFICED.

"You ate all of your own cake and Mabel's, too, Tommie?" said the mother.

"Yes'm," replied Tommie.

"You'll be sick, child."

"Well, mother, you see if anybody was going to be sick I didn't want it to be Mabel."

MAYBE NOT.

"Don't you think, Maria, that we shall know one another in heaven?"

"I don't expect, Henry, that we shall see one another."

HAS CAUSE.

"I notice the convict safe breaker is inclined to boast of his exploits."

"Naturally, he did a great deal of blowing about it."

NO, INDEED.

"And so you are married?"

"I told you I was going to be."

"But I thought it was a joke."

"It isn't."

READY TO DIE.

"Don't you know that kissing is so dangerous that it may result fatally to both parties indulging in it?"

"Let's enter into a suicide pact!"

Pains In the Stomach.

If you continually complain of pains in the stomach, your liver or your kidneys are out of order. Neglect may lead to dropsy, kidney trouble, diabetes or Bright's disease. ## His Real Weed.

"Say, old man, don't get disheartened just because your first investment went wrong; the market is full of good things, and if you will come down to the office I'll give you a pointer." "That won't do me any good; what I want is a retriever."

ALASKA DOGS DEAR

Teams of Three or Four Canines
Bring $2,000.

They Are Used to Draw Sleds in Winter and Carts in Summer; Also Used in Mines and on Trails for Packing.

Miss Emma Leonidas Kelly, the first white woman to go down the Yukon, has qualified by many strenuous experiences in Alaska to be considered an authority on the dog teams of that country. The native animals are the malamute, the huskie and the Siwash.

The first comes from the coast of Bering sea and is a cross between the Russian terrier and the Siwash. He is small, weighing 60 to 75 pounds, and has shaggy hair, which makes him look twice his real size. Under this is a coat of short, warm fur that protects him in the most severe weather.

The huskie comes from the McKenzie river, is a large gray dog weighing from 125 to 160 pounds and is covered with short, stubby fur, with an undercoat of thick fur. They can stand more hardships and go without food longer than any other dog in the north.

The Siwash dogs, which are in the majority, are a cross between a wolf and a dog, and usually gray or white in color, but occasionally black. Their weight is from 50 to 90 pounds. They rarely sleep under shelter, preferring to curl up in the snow, even with the mercury 60 degrees below zero.

In this respect the native animals are better fitted for their work than the immigrant dogs, says Miss Kelly in Country Life in America. In severe weather the latter wear little moccasins made of heavy moose skin, while nature has provided the native dogs with heavy fur covering the whole foot, even between the toes.

The sleds in general use are 7 feet long, 17 inches wide and 7 inches high, and an immense load of freight can be packed and lashed on them. The sled is guided in the trail by a pole known as the "G" pole.

The dogs are hitched about six feet ahead of the sled, and the driver walks back of the sled, holding on to the "G" pole to keep the heavily loaded sled straight in the narrow trail so that it will not tip over on the rough, sliding places.

In case the sled is heavily loaded the dogs are hooked up close to the sled and the driver rides a greater part of the time—that is, if the weather is not too cold, in which case he prefers running to keep warm.

On the creek beds there is often from one to five inches of water, and it is always a difficult matter to make the dogs go through this. They dislike getting their feet wet, but they must keep the trail and pull through it.

Immediately after getting out of the water it begins to form in little ice balls between their toes, and the whole team of dogs will lie down on the trail in their harness and go to picking and cleaning their feet, which are rarely ever sore or frozen unless they have been in water several hours.

From the last snow in the spring until the first in the fall the dogs have but little to do. At the trading posts—Dawson, Circle City, Fairbanks, Eagle, Minook—and a number of other camps where they have fair streets or roads the dogs are used to draw light freight about in little two-wheeled carts, and they are used in the mines and on the trails for packing. The pack saddles are made of heavy canvas and the average dog will pack thirty or forty pounds.

Some dogs will lie down in the mud or water with their packs on, while others seem to feel the responsibility of protecting their packs and are exceedingly careful in picking their way through thick brush or over fallen trees that obstruct the trail, leaping over pools of mud and picking their footing with great care on the small rocks in fording the streams. They rarely bark.

The dogs are fed once a day when working; the best feed is the Yukon dried salmon, but failing this bacon has proved the best substitute.

The price of Alaskan dogs is governed by the number of stampedes during a winter, which creates a great demand for dog teams with which to reach new gold fields at an early date. At such times teams of three or four dogs have brought as high as $1,800 or $2,000, where their usual price would be about $700 or $800.

Wanted an Illustration.

A little boy was advised by his father to use illustrations in his conversation whenever they should occur to him.

"For," continued the parent, "there is no more forcible way of conveying or impressing your meaning."

Shortly after, the boy was being lectured on generosity.

"It's better to give than to receive, Johnny—far better."

"Illustrate it, papa. I think I shall understand it better."

Butter Broke Bridge.

Cornelius Westphal, fifty-seven years old, died at Falk's hotel in Cedar Grove, N. J., because three pounds of butter was too much for a bridge over Peckham river. Westphal crossed to get three pounds of butter. The bridge supported his 170 pounds, but when he returned with the butter added to his weight the timbers gave way. He was in the water several minutes and caught pneumonia, which proved fatal.

NO NEXT TIME FOR HIM.

When General Braddock started out to take Fort Duquesne Washington warned him against Indian ambushes. Braddock ignored the warning and was surprised and his army cut to pieces, Braddock himself being mortally wounded. Franklin relates, rather wickedly, that Braddock remained silent the whole day on the retreat, and that the first words he spoke were: "Who would have thought it?" Then he relapsed into silence for another day, when he again collected himself and said, "We'll know better next time," and immediately afterward died.

Took the Tall End.

The Lancashire people are fond of dogs—in fact, they're very proud of them, and therefore when a prominent dog fancier came home one night and found his son had bought a nondescript mongrel he was rather riled.

"How much didst thee gie for that dog?" he inquired.

"Five shillings," replied the son.

"Tell thee what A'll do," replied the parent. "A'll go shares w' thee. A'll gie thee half a crown for ma share."

The half crown was duly paid; then the father remarked:

"A'll tak' t' tall end, and A'm goin' to kick my half outen t' door!"—London Tit-Bits.

He had been appointed a smoke inspector in Chicago. Day after day he was seen loafing around the downtown section.

"Why don't you travel around town and inspect the smoke?" demanded his chief one day.

"What's the use?" was the reply. "I can see it all from here."
